- The Ohio State University, Columbus, OH: teaching and research assistant, 1987-1988
- Cleveland MetroParks, Cleveland, OH, research intern, 1986-1987

Education

- The Ohio State University, MS, Natural Resources (Wildlife Management), 1989
- The Ohio State University, BS, Arts and Sciences (Zoology), 1984

Professional Experience

- Local Government: Since retiring, Mr. Allen has developed expertise in local government. He coordinates the Observer Corps for the League of Women Voters of Marquette County and has been an official observer of the Marquette City Commission, the City of Marquette Brownfield Redevelopment Authority, the Marquette County Reapportionment Commission, the Marquette County Board of Canvassers, and the Michigan Independent Citizens Redistricting Commission. He also serves on the City of Marquette Election Board, and as a director (previously: secretary, vice chair, and chair) of the City of Marquette Brownfield Redevelopment Authority. He also has served as a non-partisan election challenger and recount challenger. Mr. Allen's primary expertise in local government is in brownfield redevelopment, redistricting, election operations, and voting rights.
- Stratus Consulting: Mr. Allen led Stratus Consulting's science practice with Josh Lipton and Doug Beltman, and its natural resource economics practice for damage assessments with Bob Rowe and David Chapman. Mr. Allen worked extensively with federal, state, tribal, and local governments, and their legal teams to: develop and implement case strategies; plan and complete natural resource damage assessments; present assessment results to responsible parties, the general public, and the courts; and plan and implement environmental restoration. He worked on assessments, including: field research on fish and birds; interpretation of injury results for economics studies; negotiations; litigation; and restoration. Mr. Allen served as the project manager or officer-in-charge at sites in 25 states throughout the U.S. Mr. Allen also served as the project manager or officer-in-charge for other clients on environmental assessment, restoration projects, and analysis of climate impacts. He helped to develop the habitat-based replacement cost (HRC) method for implementation by the California Energy Commission, the U.S. EPA, and the New England Interstate Water Pollution Control Commission both for rule making and for application to particular facilities. He also helped develop analysis of the impacts of potential temperature and precipitation changes on the economic value of national fisheries for the U.S. EPA.
- U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service: As a natural resource damage assessment (NRDA) manager for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Mr. Allen was the project lead for the Green Bay NRDA. He directed the collection of data and information for all aspects of the assessment; coordinated the release, pathway, injury, economics, and restoration teams; advised service management and the U.S. legal team on strategic, legal, and technical decisions for the case; prepared and competed nationally for annual departmental budgets; coordinated with technical experts at the U.S. EPA, NOAA, Oneida Tribe, Menominee Tribe, the states of Michigan and Wisconsin, potentially responsible parties, and nongovernmental organizations; and lectured extensively on assessment results with universities, scientific professional organizations, local governments, environmental groups, and the general public. Mr. Allen also conducted field research on tree swallows, double-crested cormorants, bald eagles, and waterfowl as part of the Green Bay NRDA. Mr. Allen wrote (with Susan Campbell) Paper Valley (Wayne State University Press, 2023), which documents the decision to conduct the Green Bay NRDA and Fox River cleanup.

- U.S. Environmental Protection Agency: As the water quality standards coordinator for the U.S. EPA, Region V, Mr. Allen was technical lead for the water quality standards program for six Great Lakes states. He also advised agency management on strategic, legal, and technical decisions for oversight of state water quality programs; worked with staff on technical and legal analysis for each state program; worked with states and tribes on water quality standards program development and revisions; and worked on the Great Lakes Water Quality Guidance, the National “Toxics” Rule, and the Cuyahoga (Ohio) Remedial Action Plan.
- Ohio Environmental Protection Agency: As an environmental scientist, Mr. Allen reviewed Ohio construction grants and loans to build public wastewater treatment plants; evaluated potential environmental impacts, reviewed and commented on facility plans; provided guidance to communities; inspected sites for compliance; and assisted with development of State policy under State and Federal regulations.
- The Ohio State University and Cleveland MetroParks: As a research intern and graduate assistant at Cleveland MetroParks and The Ohio State University, Mr. Allen conducted research on radio-telemetry, home range and habitat use of white-tailed deer; taught conifer-hardwood dendrology; and made presentations of scientific results to the public.
